DE CASTRO -The attraction offered by this magician each night seems to abate not a jot or tittle. Hiberhian Hall last evening again contained a fine audience; the usual gifts were dis-tributed, the libratons and ventriloquial display were unique, and the performer appeared in his happiest mood except when he took his head off. It is somewhat anomalous that in thus removing his head, De Castro exhibits his greatest feat. -

A EUNNY MARRIAGE. Love sometimes makes queer voyages, and comes to anchor in strange ports. Yesterday, for instance, an old colored couple appeared before Trial Justice Mackey and asked to be "line in de holy bou !". The man was about sixty live, and blind as an owl in daylight. The woman was about the same age. The most scrutinizing physiognomist would have failed to discover the alightest indication that the female had ever been "fased" by Cupid's dart; but the old fellow, sightless is he was, seemed to be in love from the solect his head to the too of his foot. He could dearbelt harry though the ceremony fast entert. When, at last, it was completed, he reathed over, felt for his new wife's lips and gave her he old fashioned, ecstatic, high-pressure kiss, that sounded these fanns torpedo. It nearly lifted the old man of of the boots. He then paid his hit, without a group, and went on his were as happy as if he had made good Samuritan.

The name of the thief secured is Abram Ruffla, from Sumter, iate an attache of the General Assembly. . The parties throwing the carpets out of the window succeeded in making their escape. > THE ESCAPE OF GRIMES FROM THE JAIL. Sheriff Backey, who is still confined to his bed by lilness, publishes a letter vindicating himself from the insinuation of connivance at the escape of the supposed murderef of Colonel White. Aluding to the circumstance of the prisoner having been allowed the freedom of the jail yard, the sheriff says: "This privilege was granted by me on account of the alleged lilness of Grimes, and in view of the known fact that he had voluntarily surrendered himself, had voluntarily confessed the crime, and had frequently, during the past three years, expressed his willingness to answer for it before a judicial tribunal. Such circumstances would have been sufficient to impress any one with the belief that the prisoner had no wish nor inteduon to escape. Such, at any rate, was my impression." After natrating in detail the circumstances of the escape, Sherin Mackey adds: "Personally and officially I am earnestly desirous of bringing this criminal and his guilty confederate to justice for this foul marder, and on the very day preceding Grimes's escape, the son of Colonel White, at my instance, retained the ser vices of an eminent-lawyer of this city as assoctate counsel in the prosecution. - The person whom Grimes charged with having instigated this murder, and his confederates, were certainly more interested in conniving at his escape than Ior any of my friends, and I think proof of this will ere long be obtained."
